General Prompts:

What do YOU think is the most important theme, or message, conveyed in As You Like It? How do the play's characters help us to understand this message? Which character is most important in developing this message? Explain your answer using one or more scenes from the play.

Which character did you play in As You Like It? (If you played more than one character, choose the one you played that you liked best or felt was most important.) How does the character you played contribute to the play's plot, or action, or meaning, as a whole? Why is your character particularly important to anyone who sees this play? Explain your answer using one or more scenes from the play.

Who is your favorite character in As You Like it, and why? Use at least one scene from the play to explain. Be sure to use at least one adjective in explaining each characteristic of your character that makes him or her your favorite.

Re-write one of the scenes that you were in as a first-person narrative by the character you played. Imagine that you are writing it just after the scene has ended.

Compare and contrast the reasons why the couples in this play become couples. What lesson does an audience member learn from this play, and from the comic resolutions (that is, the marriages)?

Think of a particular line or set of lines in one of your scenes. Describe how your work to achieve fluency, clarity, and comprehension (the goals of your performance) helped you to make sense of that moment in that scene. Why do you think that moment in that scene was important?
